Since we published Part II of this great story last March, readers have been clamouring for more. We're pleased to oblige with ...

The Settling of St. Joseph Island, Part III:

From the files of the SJI Historical Society
By Barbara Davies

Information gleaned from the "RIVER OF DESTINY", published in 1955 by Joseph & Estelle Bayliss.

THE EARLY SETTLERS ON THE WEST SIDE obtained lumber from the sawmill of P. E. Church on Sugar Island in rafts towed by Church's tug, the PIONEER. As this mill was on the American side of the border, the lumber could not be delivered in Canadian waters; therefore, it was towed to a point above the landing place. A few blasts of the tug's siren notified the purchaser that the raft of lumber was nearby. Then the crew turned the raft loose and the purchaser, with help from neighbours, rowed out from shore and slowly towed the raft ashore.

The lumbering industry was at its height from about 1880 to 1890. Those were the days when immense rafts of logs nearly filled St. Mary's River from shore to shore. These rafts were towed by powerful tugs sounding weird signals to clear the channel. The sound terrified the new settlers in inland areas. Many lumber camps and numerous saw mills operated on the Island. Enormous quantities of cedar were shipped, some of which was used as paving blocks to pave the streets of Chicago and other cities. Both men and teams found employment in the lumber camps.

Primitive St. Joe had a stand of 5,000,000 feet of timber. Cedar grew in the flats near the shore and, excepting that on Manitoulin and Drummond Islands, it was the finest cedar that grew in the North. Many pines were scattered through the hardwood and mixed timber contained up to 4,000 feet to the tree. Later, great quantities of telegraph poles, railroad ties, and cedar post were cut. Still later, large quantities of spruce and poplar were sold for pulpwood. As sawmills were erected and lumber became available, the original log dwellings were replaced with more comfortable frame houses.

In 1901 one of the first rural telephone lines on Ontario was promoted by Humphrey and Huber Young of Jocelyn (Township) on the Huron Line from the Young farm to Sailors Encampment, thence Richards Landing, Hilton Beach and later other parts of the Island. Today (1935), the St. Joseph Municipal Telephone System has long distance connections with the Bell Telephone Company providing twenty-four service, both locally and to all outside points.

In 1919, George Langstaff began operating a gasoline powered ferry running a cable from Camp d'Ours (Island) to Kensington Point on the mainland; and in 1922 Walter Lay built and operated a similar ferry between the head of the Island and Pine Island, which is connected to the mainland by a causeway. The Government acquired both these ferries in June 1934. Since that time free transportation was supplied. These ferries were abandoned about January of 1953 when the Ontario Government placed in operation the completely modern ferry, the ST. JOSEPH ISLANDER, which gave free service 24 hours each day, winter and summer, making the crossing at Humbug Point in three minutes. The road from the ferry was paved west to the Sault and also in an easterly direction.

In 1892 Joseph Rickaby established the weekly ISLAND HERALD, the only newspaper ever published on the Island (until the ISLAND CLIPPINGS was established in 1995). Since 1919 the paper (was) published in Bruce Mines by the late Fred Rickaby, son of the founder.

One of the greatest boons to the Islanders was the extension of the Great Lakes Power Co.'s line to the Island in the early 1930's. Electric power with all that it entails is now widely used. Neither Drummond, Sugar nor Neebish Islands had (electrical power) until 1953.

In October 1905 branches of the Women's Institute were organized at Richards Landing and Kentvale. Since then half a dozen other branches (were) organized. The members promoted the holding of tonsil, goiter, dental, tubercular and eye clinics, maintained a bed in the hospital at Richards Landing, made other donations to it and to the Red Cross and other organizations of national importance, and busied themselves in uncounted ways to promote community welfare. There has been no more important influence for good on the Island than the Women's Institute.

Shortly after the close of World War I the first hospital was started as an outpost hospital of the Red Cross. It was promoted largely by the Women's Institute. It was a three bed hospital and the village council paid for rent and fuel. In 1925 the St. Joseph Island Hospital Association was formed and the Provincial Government chartered it. By November permanent and summer residents had contributed $2,500 and a building was purchased. This building was destroyed by fire in March 1929. The $3,300 derived from insurance was pitifully inadequate for rebuilding; and in 1930 Mrs. Mary Ann Matthews, a summer resident from Cincinnati (Ohio) donated a $35,000 hospital as a memorial to her late husband, Mortimer Matthews, who died nearby in the autumn of 1928.

Mrs. Florence Orrell, another summer resident, donated a fund to be used for the care of young children and elderly women: and in 1934 presented a much needed X-Ray machine to the hospital. Miss Mamie Grindley donated a complete set of surgical instruments and many others made generous cash contributions. Dr. J. E. Godfrey a former resident physician donated $10,000 in memory of his late wife, who died in Seattle, to build an extension to the hospital, which was completed in 1954.

Readers are invited to re-visit Parts I and II of Barbara's article, which were published in our December 3, 2015 issue (#1020) and our March 3, 2016 issue (#1028). All issues published since 2009 are available in full colour at: www.islandclippings.com

Island girls Rule Too!

By Carole Hunt-Ford

IN THE OPENING WEEK of exciting Rio Olympic action that saw women winning all of Canada's hardware with the exception of Andre Degrasse's epic bronze medal in the 100m on Sunday, it was only fitting that it was also all girls representing at the Ontario Summer Games in Mississauga this past weekend.

MacKenzie Gowlett (R)

Two Grade 10 students from CASS, both from the Island, were first time participants in a Summer Games and got to enjoy the 'Olympic' experience with an Opening Ceremony, a stay in the Athletes' Village at a university dorm, and don a team uniform representing their region.

Recently our outreach included re-furnishing a middle-aged gentleman after his partner took everything back to the bare walls!

We have just received a rust plush French provincial arm chair and sofa table. We have a steel entrance door and storm door, which are 80" by 34" wide.

Way to go girls!

ST. JOSEPH ISLAND MUSEUM MOMENT

THE STUDENTS ARE NEARING the end of their summer experience here and I thought it would be fun to have them write another column. So here are some of their thoughts.

Working at the museum has been a fun yet educational experience. We have learned a lot about the Island's rich history such as the number of rooms in the Rainsmere to the origin of the creamery. We have observed and researched an abundance of artifacts, each with their own story. We've worked at fun events with many kind volunteers. This summer job has given us a great many experiences.

We have learned about the many businesses the Island has or had at one time, for example Kentvale, a huge part of the Island's past and present. Kentvale started when Emily Brown and Fred Kent (who was willed a decent sum of money) which he and Emily used to make an addition to his mill and create a small store. There's so much more to the story that we would love to share. Why not make a visit to the museum soon?

Not only do we learn interesting local tidbits but we have the opportunity to research things that we might not know much about. One artifact that drew our attention was a notice of quarantine warning that a house contained diphtheria. The notice sparked our curiosity and we decided it must be researched to see what exactly diphtheria was. We found out that it was a highly contagious bacteria. Interesting.

It has also been fun working at the events. Heritage Tea Day and Teddy Bear Picnic, there was plenty to do before during and after the events. It was a pleasure to work with our volunteers and it was satisfying knowing that it was a job well done and people were enjoying themselves.

The museum has given us many wonderful practical experiences that we know we will use, such as vacuuming, sweeping and dusting. But just as important we gained some fascinating local historical knowledge.

We thank the St Joseph Island Museum board for giving us such a rich working experience this summer.

Hailey, Kyle and Liam

Thank you summer students. It's been a fun and productive summer. The museum is nearing the end of its season, so if you are thinking about coming out for a visit, please do so. Come out and see what we've been up to.
